"See you at the Pep Rally"

Vol. XXIV — No. 3

MONTREAL, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1934

PRICE TWO CENTS

Union Ballroom Scene Of Frosh Pep Rally Tonight

First Major Event Of Campus Season Starts At 8.00 P.M.—Iz Aspler's Orchestra Will Supply Music—George S. Currie, Of Board Of Governors To Welcome Frosh—Prominent Campus Personalities Slated To Address Gathering.

FRESHMEN will hold the spotlight tonight as they gather in the Ballroom of the Union for the annual Pep Rally, which starts at 8 o'clock. Leading campus personalities are scheduled to address the gathering. A novel feature of the evening will be the attendance of Iz Aspler and his well-known orchestra, to add spirit to the evening with peppy music.

College songs and cheers, led by Bob Freeman, with George Small at the piano, are on the program. Free refreshments and smokes will round out what promises to be one of the feature events of the college season.

Prominent Speakers

Included among the speakers will be George S. Currie, of the Board of Governors, who will extend a welcome to the newcomers. Lorne Gales, president of the Students' Council, Donald Small, head of the Union House Committee, and Major D. Stuart Forbes will be among those addressing the freshmen.

Prominent men in McGill's athletic circles will also say a few words to the newcomers. Tonight will be a rare occasion for all frosh to get close-ups of such personalities as "Shag" Shaughnessy, famous mentor of the football squad, Don Young, who has starred on McGill football teams for the past eight years, Gordie Melkiejohn, captain of the 1934 hockey squad, and Phil Edwards, internationally known track luminary.

Hollie McHugh, president of the Scarlet Key Society will speak to the gathering on the purposes and activities of that organization.

Pep Rally Tradition

The Pep Rally according to those in charge, is calculated to infuse every freshman with the true McGill spirit, and to encourage him to identify himself wholeheartedly with campus activity, both academic and extra-curricular. It is intended to weld the first year men into a cohesive body, that will back all McGill teams to the limit, both with moral and vocal support.

The committee in charge urges every freshman to take advantage of this opportunity of getting together with all his classmates and such an air of informal conviviality. Jot it down in your Freshman Bible: "The Union Ballroom, tonight at 8.00, for the snap-shotted event of the season—the PEP RALLY!"

Orchestra Prepares For String Concert

Mr. Hanson Heads New Group For Music Appreciation

The Conservatorium Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Tupper, is at present busily rehearsing, with a view to giving a string concert early in November in its first public appearance.

According to an announcement made yesterday, a study group is being organized by the Conservatorium for those interested, which will impart to the beginner a practical knowledge of the piano, as well as an appreciation of music. The meetings will take place weekly, and the amount of practice will not seriously interfere with other activities.

Interested students may consult the notices on the bulletin boards, or get in touch with the Secretary of the Conservatorium. The instructor of the new group will be Mr. Frank Hanson, Mus. Bac.

Freshmen Reporters

There are still some vacancies on the Daily Staff, particularly in the Sports Department, and on Sunday and Monday nights. Anyone interested will be cordially welcomed, and may fill in a registration card any time during the day.

Football Ushers

Freshmen or anyone else wishing to act as ushers at the Montreal Football game this Saturday may leave their names with Bill Giffelman, or Bert Yates. A list of the ushers and their instructions will appear in Friday's paper.

Speaker Attributes Lamb's Success To Unfailing Kindness

C. B. James Addressed St. James' Literary Society Last Night

FAILED AS POET

Nineteenth Century Author Turned To Essays Rather Than Drama

"The ability to see good where others fail to see it was the most noticeable characteristic of Charles Lamb," claimed C. B. James in the presidential address given to the St. James' Literary Society last night. It is this unfailing kindness to which Lamb owes his present eminence as an essayist.

A failure as a poet and a dramatist, he was adept in producing a well-turned phrase but lacked the dramatic appeal necessary to succeed as a playwright in the opinion of the speaker. In fact his first attempt was so successful that the actors were biased on the first—and only—night of its production. Lamb was honest enough to be one of those who showed their disapproval, even though it was his own play.

Turned to Essay

He took the hint and turned to that form of literature to which he was most suited—the essay. He never became a popular author, but still had—and has—a large following. His audience is composed of the "gentle reader" who "appreciated the character of love and sweetness which all his work contains—emotions born out of the poverty of his early life and the sorrow due to his sister's attack of madness."

Reviewing Lamb's technique, Mr. James asserted the author's style is never cynical; his humour always produces "a smile or sometimes a chuckle—never a laugh." He pierces right to the heart of the issue, never being distracted by unimportant details. He has the ability of making the most insignificant subject interesting, particularly when he writes about children or about the city of London—his two great loves. He preferred to deal with memories of simple things and simple people.

It is not, however, only as an essayist that Lamb is known to the work of letters. He also instituted a new style of criticism, emphasizing and enlarging the author's views instead of merely criticizing individual parts. In collaboration with his sister Mary he also wrote one of the most famous summaries of Shakespeare's plays—"Lamb's Tales From Shakespeare."

Freshmen Ushers Needed In Coming Football Contests

AS in other years the Scarlet Key Society is calling for Freshmen ushers to work at the football games taking place at the Molson Stadium this fall. Roughly about seventy-five to eighty ushers are required.

For the benefit of those who do not know, the Scarlet Key Society receives about five hundred dollars for this work; and it is with this fund of money that they entertain visiting teams, debaters, etc., from other colleges.

In the near future, the President of the Students' Council, Lorne Gales, or some member of the Scarlet Key will address the freshmen about this matter, and will appeal for a sufficient number of volunteers for this work. If enough volunteers should fail to present themselves, some compulsory measures will have to be taken.

Jewish Club Plans Informal Reception

Maccabean Circle Resumes Activities Sunday, Oct. 14th.

IN UNION BALLROOM

Executive Plans Ambitious Program For Coming Season

The executive of the Maccabean Circle, the Jewish students' organization at McGill, announced yesterday that a reception will be held in the Ballroom of the Union, on Sunday afternoon, October 14th. With this function the Circle will resume activities for the coming season, and an ambitious program is planned.

Marked by an air of complete informality, this projected reception will act as a means of making the students acquainted with one another. Freshmen will be afforded an opportunity of meeting not only those of their own year, but upperclassmen as well. Refreshments and smokes will be served.

Special Committee

During the summer, a special committee worked to draw up an ambitious program for this season. Plans for meetings, and for a new type of study groups were formulated. Several feature events, to be announced later, have been planned. In its work, the committee considered both the cultural and social aspects of the Circle.

The executive hopes that every Jewish student will make a point of attending this function. Announcements of the utmost importance will be made with reference to plans for the future.

The Maccabean Circle was founded in 1905, and after suspending activity for two or three years, was revived last year. Every Jewish student at McGill is automatically a member of the organization, and the executive anticipates maximum co-operation. Notable among the many phases of the Circle's activities, is the Book Fund, which in the past has supplied the library with many books of Jewish interest.

Newcomers Invited To McGill Players Opening Gathering

Executive Calls First General Meeting For Next Tuesday

SUCCESS ANTICIPATED

Announcement Of First Major Production Expected Soon

It was learned yesterday that the McGill Players' Club will hold its first general meeting in the Grill Room of the Union, next Tuesday, at 5.00 p.m. This meeting, Howard Stikeman, president of the club, announces, will serve as a reunion for old members, and as a means of acquainting freshmen with the organization.

Many important announcements concerning activity for the coming season will be made, and it is possible that the executive will be able to make public their selection for the first major production of the coming season. This meeting will also see the re-election of Dr. C. W. Hendel as honorary president.

Purpose of Club

When interviewed last night, Stikeman stated that he was confident that the club would duplicate last year's success. He referred to the enthusiastic reception the two major productions of last year "Rope" and "Hay Fever" received, and expressed assurance that even better success was expected this year.

"It is hoped," he said, "that a good many freshmen and freshettes will attend the opening meeting of the club. Ample opportunity will be afforded to all to gain practical experience in all phases of dramatic activity—in acting, scenery design and construction, lighting, make-up, business management and publicity." He went on to speak of the Workshop Department of the Club, which is headed by Harriet C. Colby. In addition to the two major productions, he stated, several series of one-act plays are presented, and in these productions, the necessary experience, requisite for major productions, is acquired.

In addition to this, it is believed that a series of studio lectures on topics related to the drama is being planned. More definite information in this regard will be available at the opening meeting. All students interested, both upperclassmen and freshmen are invited to attend.

Debating Union Executive

There will be a meeting of the Debating Union Executive today at one o'clock in the Union Grill. It is essential that all members of the executive be present.

Exchange Stocks Up With Old Text Books

The Exchange in its first day of operation took in over nine hundred books. It will be open again today from nine to two and three to five-thirty. Those who were already refused the reception of certain texts are advised to hold on to them and to watch the Daily, in the event that a shortage might arise, in which case ample notification will be given through this medium. Notices will continue to appear outside the exchange from time to time indicating desirable or undesirable books. The exchange will be open in a few days for the selling of books. A large number of books used in the different courses may be procured at moderate prices. All the popular texts are available in large quantities, while other books are frequently to be found.

At The Union

This column will be run daily and will be a bulletin board where all Union House announcements will appear.

Freshman Pep Rally at 8.00 tonight; all freshmen are invited. This will provide a good chance for the incoming men to meet some of the leaders on the campus.

There will be a short sing song and a few speeches; cigarettes and food will be provided by the House Committee.

Upper classmen are also invited.

The export of asbestos in August amounted in value to $239,799 compared with $380,897 in August last year. The largest buyers were the United States, Japan, Germany and France. Asbestos sand and waste exports were valued at $122,807 compared with $122,790 and the manufactures of asbestos $11,910 compared with $6,208.

College Spirit Again

SIX YEARS AGO this autumn the time-honored custom of freshmen hazing was officially abolished amid loud cheerings and applause. Today a lamentable condition exists; freshmen wander about McGill entirely untutored, without the haziest idea of what their traditional duties are. It is not altogether their fault, for there is no one officially responsible now for their college "public-life" education. It is a matter that requires serious and earnest thought.

We at McGill, have perhaps become a little too disinterested in official student activities about the campus, with dire results. We have become too blasé. The campus is dead — there is no life, no pep. There is a lack of college consciousness. One student becomes a member of the Players' Club — another joins the Operatic and Choral Society — a third enrolls in the C.O.T.C. — when anything official, such as the meetings of the Students' Society used to be, comes along — they are too busy. There are too many sectional interests and not enough 100 per cent college interest. These activities about college are all very well in themselves — we have nothing about them at the moment to criticize — but they should not be allowed to override or to prevent the interest of individual students in official college activities, of a quasi-public nature. We need something at college to arouse the student body to a sense of consciousness and public spirit. What means should be employed to accomplish this end? Whatever method is used, it must be first applied to the freshman — there is little use in trying to alter directly the habits of the older students — they are steeped and set in the ways of their sins.

Personally we are strongly in favour of a return to the system of hazing — not in any extreme form, but of a modified nature. Persecution is a great means of binding together people of all kinds and conditions — even freshmen succumb to it. Sufferers in common usually feel very strongly together.

Frankly we admit that we are deeply pained when we see callow freshmen walk into the Union with a cool, unconcerned look, and their hats jauntily perched on top of their craniums. This sense of pain grows to the proportion of an absolute injury when they have the gall to enter the Arts Building with their hats still. Shades of Caesar, what are we coming to?

The freshmen must be trained to be college conscious. In the past, even auditors of this august paper have decried this spirit of college consciousness — have even spoken disparagingly to say the least, of college life — we cannot depreciate this attitude too greatly. We do not care who knows we go to college — we are not falsely proud of the fact.

In conclusion, we reiterate the need for measures to increase interest in college students; and if corrective measures of some kind are not taken soon, we shall find ourselves in straits, which if not serious, are at least extremely embarrassing.

Conversation

IF IT be true that the main characteristic which distinguishes man from the lower forms of animal life is the power of self expression through the spoken tongue, then is there indeed cause for alarm anent the level to which conversation has fallen. Gone seem to be the days when men — and women, too — could be anything but bored by each others company and conversation, unless there be "something to do."

Gone are the days when people gifted with, say, a college education or artistic ability could "ipso facto" command the attention of eager listeners merely around a fireside. Too many of us now rely on the weather with all its strange possibilities to sustain us when we have to speak to someone for longer than a mere greeting.

Naturally there are reasons aplenty for our neglecting to develop latent ability as interesting speakers. Our world is no longer that of the leisurely English coffee house, and there are countless new attractions to occupy the mind without turning to private discussions with our fellow men. The bore and the windbag go merrily on, while ordinary people on the other hand are reduced to monosyllables and stock expressions.

Worse still, the ordinary amenities expected in private conversation are occasionally forgotten. Our morning "hello" or "nice day, isn't it?" is all too frequently said with the glum rather than the cheery look to accompany it. Too often even a mere greeting of any sort is lacking for those fellow students whom we see frequently in the campus and classrooms.

The value of conversation cannot be denied—even by those who seldom practice it intelligently. As a stimulus to friendship and understanding, and as a means of gathering information it deserves more attention than it receives. Considering all this, the S.C.M. merits especial commendation in resuming its old practice of having freshmen, freshettes, and upperclassmen in the University become acquainted with each, not by dancing but through the medium of conversation—in the "Conversat."

PANEGYRICUS

By McParfootin

Salutations!

TANNED by the scorching rays of the summer's sun, and ruefully wondering whether the apple of his eye in August may not turn out to be the onion of October, and who gives a hoot about the international situation, McParfootin plunks his feet on the table, and his delicately manicured finger-nails on the renovated keyboard of a "Daily" typewriter (Managing Ed. please note); to hammer out a word or two of greetings to his many cohorts, old and new. This "Hello-we're-glad-you're-back" business seems to be quite the order of the day, for when in Rome, do when the Romans do. Well, we've donned a black shirt, with an eye to cutting down on laundry bills, and say "Hello." We shoot a particularly cajoling glance at the Fresh and Freshettes, for they form a solid body of potential readers. Old-timers seem to think they know better. So, to our Freshmen and female fledglings alike we say "Welcome. You are on the threshold of a great experience. Can you loan me a dollar?" The old-timers we try to avoid as much as possible.

We Dowanna!

ANY Senior cynic, hypotenusing against one of the massive pillars in the hall of the Arts Building, will be observed to look upon the hurry and bustle of the first week of college with an expression of pained contempt. But he will be absolutely powerless to avoid it. He will be drawn into the maelstrom of backslapping and handshaking, much against his will, to find himself saying automatically and half incoherently to dozens of people—if he's that popular—"Fine! And you? Oh, I took a cruise around the world. Had a great time. And you? Think so? You know, other people have told me that too. And you? G'bye! . . . Fine! And you?"

Oh, I took a cruise around the world, had a great time, think so? You know, other people have told me that too. And you? G'bye! . . . Fine! And you?

After all, there are only some three thousand students in this university. It would be almost feasible for them to hold a conference a day or two before the college session is resumed, and have each and every one read a detailed report of the past summer's activity. The Dirty Dishers would be seated at the head table. Every one would then be COMPLETELY informed, and the first week's conversation could be held strictly limited to the weather. We would then be spared a good deal of repetition and repetition, and our cynical misanthropic senior in particular would be able to refer to all and sundry to the top right-hand corner of the—"Daily," or shall we be so expensive as to suggest the Gazette?

Anent Nothing In Particular.

A FRESHMAN'S LOT is not a happy one. Not even here at McGill, where the barbarities of Fresh-baiting have long been tossed into the discard. For, even though his physical security is fairly well guaranteed, in spite of the fact that he is no longer obliged to scour the steps of the Arts Building with a tooth-brush and a fine-comb; yes, although he is no longer mulcted to the extent of one dollar for a sung book,—a far more formidable fate awaits him.

No sooner does he hesitantly enter the university portals, when he is pounced upon by would-be benefactors. He is showered with a veritable blizzard of advice, a told the why and wherefore of this and that (and possibly the other thing), and is left more in the dark than ever before, only to find his way out of the fog by his own blither experience. But he too strays. In time he too becomes an adviser, a purveyor of sage counsel, and can give all subsequent Fresh at least 32 fool-proof and cast-iron ways by which to pass English Two. Sic transit gloria mundi.

Advice To Advisors

THE last paragraphs were really a propos of nothing. It was only our clumsy way of leading up to an issue that looms large on our horizon. Its importance is downright elephantine. It is something very close to yours truly's heart. Advice to advisors—they too need a little sage guidance, and was McParfootin ever known to deny a body his need? But no, 'tis something more than mere guidance that they require. One school of thought dogmatically suggests instant and complete obliteration. A second school of thought, more tender, more considerate, and with whose views we all heartily subscribe, is not quite so severe.

Our own advice to advisors scarcely needs elucidation: 1. Approach prospective advisee cautiously, and smile sweetly. 2. Take advisee gently by the hand and lead him to the nearest available restaurant. 3. Advise advisee to order meal for two. Explain that generosity is a primary requisite to gaining recognition at college. 4. Listen carefully to advisee's tale of woe. 5. Assume expression of compassionate understanding, and gently place arm about shoulder of advisee. 6. Order extra helping of dessert. 7. Do NOT completely solve advisee's problem. If you do, it may mean your last free meal from that source. 8. Glance furtively at the bill. 9. Register consternation. 10. Advise advisee to pay for both (cf. rule no. 3). 11. Rise and bow stiffly to advisee. Take leave in dignified manner. 12. Look around for another advisee when next meal-time rolls round. Steps 4 and 7 may, if advisor sees fit, be omitted.

This suggestion may completely do away with the hungry expression which many imparters of advice seem to carry around. Beside, if both parties are sufficiently vociferous in their attacks upon the soup, the advisee may be spared the agony of hearing what is guaranteed to be the salvation of his soul. This, however, is a moot question.

McPARFOOTIN.

Hints To Daily Reporters

The following is an extract from the Daily's Hand Book for Reporters, which owing to financial exigencies we are unable to distribute as in past years. Consequently we would ask the reporters to clip this section of the paper, read it, and save it for future reference. Only a portion of the hand book will appear in this issue, but the remainder will be printed shortly.

The following words present suggestions as to rhetorical and typographical style as well as some general advice to the college reporter.

Many of the rules contained herein are arbitrary, and opposite practices have as much right to authority, but uniformity of style cannot be obtained unless definite rulings are adopted and ADHERED TO in dealing with doubtful points. It is just as correct, for instance, to write EMPHASIZE rather than EMPHASISE but the DAILY has adopted the latter spelling and every reporter is expected to use it.

The suggestions contained in this little pamphlet will not teach you to write. This can only be learned by constant and careful practice. Above all, try to remember that you are writing for a newspaper — the DAILY is not a seed catalogue.

History And Organization Of The Daily

McGill Daily, official organ of the Student's Society of McGill University, is a newspaper published daily, except Sunday during the academic years. It was founded in 1911, by W. E. G. Murray, and was preceded by three undergraduate publications. The Gazette, The Fortnightly and The Martlet.

The direction of the Daily is vested in a Managing Board of three members, except that in financial matters the Students' Council has final decision, after consulting with this Board. Under the Managing Board is a number of Associate Editors. Of these, some are special feature writers. The duty of the others is to edit the individual issues of the paper, each man being assigned to, and having absolute charge of, one paper per week. These are commonly known as the Night Editors, and it is to them that the reporters are responsible. The Editor-in-Chief is head of the paper and represents the Daily on the Students' Council. He is responsible for the contents of the paper, principally the editorial page, which enjoys complete freedom and is not used for the expression of the opinions of the Students' Council. The Managing Editor has general direction of the news services, library, morgue, mechanical arrangements and circulation. The third member of the Managing Board is either the News Editor or the Sports Editor. The News Editor is in charge of a signing work to the reporters.

Promotions are made solely on merit, the Associate Editors making the necessary recommendations to the Managing Board. All positions on the staff are honorary.

The Reporters

Reporters should try to realize at the outset that their success or non-success on the Daily depends entirely upon their co-operation or lack of it. An essential quality of any newspaper reporter is regularity and punctuality, and this quality is as necessary on the Daily as elsewhere.

The work of reporters consists mainly of "covering assignments." Assignments are made out in the Assignment Book every day by the News Editor, between the hours of one and one-thirty p.m. Every reporter must call at the office on the day assigned to him between one and one-thirty and check off the assignment opposite his name. In this way the night editor knows early in the afternoon what work is being done and what is being neglected. If for any reason the reporter is unable to cover an assignment he will indicate the fact in the assignment book, before one o'clock, giving reasons. Remember that inexcused absences count against you almost as much as inaccuracy.

Reporters who prefer to work for the sports department will receive all instructions from the sports editor.

Reporters are expected to obey implicitly the instructions of the Night Editor who may happen to be in charge of the issue. Remember that there is other work to be done besides the covering and writing up of assignments. There is the notice column to edit, the "What's On" to compile and a number of re-writes and advances to attend to. Besides these, there may be occasional messages outside the building. When you finish whatever you may be doing ask for more work and remember that the Night Editor ranks the cheerful performance of the smaller tasks on exactly the same level as the covering of an assignment.

The Essentials Of News Writing

The qualities most desired and striven for in news writing are accuracy of statement—in small things as well as in great, in particulars as well as in essentials—simplicity, directness and point. Never attempt fine writing; never use 1 1/2 words where small words are possible. Go right to the heart of the subject without flourish of trumpets. Stop when the story is told without conclusion or moral tag.—C. R. Williams, Editor of the Indianapolis News.

Accuracy. Too much stress cannot be placed upon the importance of accuracy. Verify everything; or if verification is impossible quote the authority from which you received your information. Consistent accuracy is the best recommendation that a reporter can have for appointment to an Associate Editorship, while errors and inaccuracy count heavily against all candidates.

Inaccuracies in initials, names and class numerals are inexcusable. See that every name you write is correct. When in doubt use the Students' Directory or the telephone.

Use the class graduation year number to show the year of a student, and not the numeral of the class, such as: John Doe is in Arts '35, and not in Arts II.

over three months, a casual visit to the downstairs regions of that familiar establishment gave the writer a pleasant surprise and a realization of a) the fine feelings that now sway the members of the Students' Council in general and the Union House Committee in particular, (O tempora O Mores!) and b) the continued existence of altruism in a world that seems sadly lacking in appreciation of the finer impulses of man.

This condition of mind was caused by a glance at those sacred precincts where one was wont to exercise one's prerogative as a gentleman. For since the days of ignorance and barbarism of 1933 the old signs of abandonment are now dispersed: in the washroom there are now revealed in an ill-borne glory, a glory of white enamel and spotless porcelain, four fine wash-basins.

The room has an air, in addition to the four neat, and we hope full, liquid-soap distributors that overhang the four basins. These themselves where has been seen their equal? The homes of the great know no such basins . . . large, compact of design, yet catering to the most slovenly, or the most meticulous washer, notably supported on single pillars of modest pattern, soaring upward from the floor like lotus flowers, open to the advent of the worshipper. So much for the feelings of the Students' Council.

Yet the Altruism is no less important. Like the Greeks of old, these august personages regard beauty as its own justification. For them no catering to the deepest instincts of the mob, no cavilling before the false God Utility.

In consequence where, in the time that was, many men washed uncomfortably, and felt beneath their hands the porous rasping surface of the cast out basins, today four chosen ones, the leaders of their kind, in supreme bliss, and the luxury that follows privilege, can wallow in the floods of water, the

Oarsmen Primed For Annual Test Against Blueboys

Red Rowers To Compete On Saturday

Experts Favour McGill Crew For First Time In Years

MOLMAN'S CHARGES IN PERFECT SHAPE

Largest Crowd In History Of Event Expected

THE red oarsmen went through another heavy workout yesterday in preparation for the annual rowing classic against Varsity on Saturday. Coach Urbain Molman took the boys twice over the two and a half mile stretch on the Lachine Canal. The eight gave proof of their extensive four week's training with smooth rhythm and greatly improved stroking. "Pep" Bourne, who will row against Varsity for the first time, is holding down number six with a smooth and consistent stroke equal to the best of them.

Varsity Reluctant

To date, little is known of the Toronto crew. Coach Tommy Louden, who has trained the eights for the last six seasons, has had little to say about the progress of his crew beyond the bald statement that the Blueboys are working hard with a practically new line-up, and are counting on keeping Toronto's championship.

Recruits for the Red squad are more numerous this year than last and the three gaps in the crew have been amply filled by Louis Vachek, Bill Butler and "Pep" Bourne.

Heavier Crew

The series of McGill-Varsity rowing have been run for the last eight seasons. Toronto has won six times to McGill's two. The home boys were victors last in 1929. Rowing experts are inclined to believe that McGill now has the finest crew since then. In form the two crews have been about equal for the last two seasons, but McGill has faced a disadvantage in weight. Last year the teams were practically equal with regard to avoirdupois and the race proved to be one of the closest ever run. This year McGill has added considerably to its weight. They also have experience in their favour.

The red and white crew uses what is called the continental style. Molman has used it ever since he took over the crew nine years ago. The main features of this form of rowing is a straight back and slight pause on the reach.

No Injuries

Bourne's cold is improving and ought to be completely gone by tomorrow. Harold Elliott complained yesterday of the snuffles, but that is nothing to worry about. Otherwise all the members are in A-1 condition.

The run last night was made in the new boat, the John W. McConnell II, which, although it is four years old, has only been raced twice. While the time last night was about the same as that on Monday night, the boys seem to prefer the old shell.

The inclination of most quarters is to regard McGill as the favoured crew, an estimate which is encouraging the Redmen to put more spirit into their work.

Good Turnout For Rugger Yesterday

THE rugger team had its first practice yesterday, at 5 p.m. on the campus. Though the turnout was large, there is still time for any others who wish to do so to come out and play. John Thompson, captain of this year's team, was on hand yesterday, as were several others who played last season.

Although about eight men have been lost to the squad through graduation, there remains a good nucleus on which to base hopes for McGill's wrestling of the intercollegiate crown this year, from Varsity. To this end, the services of a new coach, Mr. Leeds, have been obtained, and he urges all who wish to participate to make an appearance immediately.

A heavy schedule awaits the team, for both Queen's and Varsity are both expected to have strong squads.

Slants On Sports

THIS column makes its bow at an auspicious time of the year, what with winter sports swinging to the fore and summer's amusements not yet over and the World Series starting today and everything. Some nasty people will undoubtedly say that it is fittingly mentioned in the same sentence with the World Series, seeing that both should appear only once a year, but of that we shall see later.

WHAT this country needs, besides lowered taxes, higher tariffs, an amalgamated railroad system, and a good five-cent cigar, is more and better names for its national heroes. The remark is engendered by the aforementioned World Series, which commences today at Navin's Field, Detroit, where eighteen young men, or probably a good deal more, will lock horns in the American diamond classic for the honour of St. Louis and Detroit as well as some five thousand of Uncle Sam's iron men apiece. Of those eighteen, or more, young men, a large number rejoice in glamorous pet names, bestowed by the large-hearted press and people of the great nation directly south of this one. Foremost among the sentimentally-named ones are, of course, Dixie and Daffy Dean, the pilloving stars of the St. Louis, who have been so called for their peculiar temperamental idiosyncrasies, among which are rendering perfectly good uniforms in fits of passion, questioning the ancestral lineage of umpires and lighting fires on the field on cold days. Two of their comrades of the mound bear the monikers of Dizzy and Wild Bill, being in private life the Messrs. Vance and Hallahan, respectively. At third base on the St. Louis team resides Mister Pepper Martin, at second base Frisky Frankie Frisch and in left field Ducky-Wucky Medwick. Indeed a splendid array, you might say. But see the Detroit forces. Among the tollers of the box the Tigers can boast of Schoolboy Rowe, General Crowder, Thomas Felling Bridges, while the outfield points with pride to those two sterling ball hawks, Jo-Jo White and Goose Goslin. A decided disappointment, however, is the infield, who, with their heads bowed in shame, confess to the possession of such prosaic names as Mickey Cochrane, Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer, Bill Rogell and Marvin Owen. Tak tak, think — Marvin! And what is Canada's answer to this effusion of affectionate nomenclature? Shag! Howie! Chuck! Don! Fiddlesticks! Wake up, Canadians! Where's your pride?

SPEAKING of baseball reminds us to turn our eyes sadly in the direction of New York, where the sackcloth and ashes business is considerably revived, due to the sudden demise of William Terry and his Giants. "Is Brooklyn still in the league?" now takes its place besides those other two fatal questions, "Who was that lady I seen you with last night?" and "Do you take this woman to be your lawful wedded wife?"

YESTERDAY'S Daily carried a very interesting announcement anent the fiscal expenditures and incomes of the various McGill athletic activities. Rugby, which has been called a gladiatorial sport and its income estimated at many thousands of dollars, yielded the sum of $4,005.82, and, along with Hockey, Tennis, Swimming and Water Polo, was the only sport to yield any revenue at all. In fact, the latter two sports expended more than they brought in, by far, so that Rugby and Hockey alone were the only two to show a profit for the season, which, taken together, totaled $5,523.87.

The total deficit incurred by the University for every form of sport, intramural and otherwise, was only $3,380.86. In other words, Hockey and Rugby very nearly paid for all the athletic activity of the whole University for the period of one year and did not, along with the others, cost the Management $20,000, as no other authority than Professor Stephen Leacock intimated last spring. Which only goes to show that the Golf team, which has won seven championships for McGill since 1921, should get more than $6.80 from the Management to carry on for the year. The members of this Club pay all their expenses out of their own pockets. No wonder they call it a rich man's game!

It has probably seeped into your

Interfaculty Football Soon To Commence

HIGH hopes for an early start in interfaculty football are held by Major Forbes. If anything comes of them, this sport will commence next week.

The great necessity in connection with this activity is for men to take over managerial duties. The various faculties are also in need of representatives to take care of the many duties connected with that office. All interested are asked to get in touch with Major Forbes.

New Referee

A new referee has been obtained for interfaculty games in the person of Johnny Bennett. This branch of the game will thus be greatly improved and the old popularity of interfaculty rugby should return.

Applications to the league must be turned into the Athletic Office by October 5, along with information such as suitable evenings for games, times preferred, and so forth.

Intramural Athletics Needs New Manager

MAJOR FORBES is seeking a new interfaculty manager to take complete charge of intramural sports. Directing interfaculty or interclass rugby, soccer, basketball and baseball are to be the activities of the new manager. He will have co-operating with him the managers of the individual sports. All applicants should communicate as soon as possible with the Major in the Union.

BOXING

The first boxing practice of the season will be held in the Montreal High Gym tomorrow at 5.00 o'clock. All interested are urged to attend.

Senior Football Squad Practises For Varsity Tilt

New Plays Used In Preparation For Big Game

FRESH from its conquest of the R.M.C. cadets, Frank Shaughnessy's football squad is working hard in preparation for the opening of the intercollegiate grid season on Saturday, Toronto will be hosts to the Redmen that day, and from all reports a warm reception is awaiting the squad.

Pleased with the strength of his team's defence, Shag has been working on offensive plays during the practices this week. New plays have been tried out, and new methods of attack planned, so that where six plays were used by the squad in Saturday's game, several more should be in working order in time for the Varsity tilt.

Smith in Form

The attack so far has centred around Riddell, Craig and Joe Smith, with Markham coming in for his share of ball-carrying duties. Riddell seems slated for a regular position on the half line, in which case Smith will remain at quarter. The versatile Californian, in good shape after his inauguration in the Canadian game, is being primed for some heavy bucking, where he should to some extent at least make up for the absence of Gilbert and Krukowski, who looked after that job last year.

Bob Craig has been spending most of his spare time practicing kicking, and though it is too much to hope that he can equal the spectacular work of Bob Iltis, the Toronto ace, he should not give away much yardage by the time Saturday's game comes along. Riddell, who will understudy Craig in the booting assignment, has also spent many arduous hours lofting spirals through the air.

Few Injuries

Everyone came through Saturday's game in fine shape, which speaks well for the pre-season training at Knowlton. One or two of the men are suffering from minor injuries, but no one was hurt to such an extent that he will feel the effects after another day of rest.

Ruschin, the American line man, who with Smith made his Canadian debut Saturday, has been practising place kicks during the last two practices, and it looks as though the job which 'Young Shag' Shaughnessy handled so well last year will be invested in him.

Teams Well Matched

This season's intercollegiate race is wide open if exhibition games are any indication of the strength of the respective teams. Varsity and McGill showed unexpected strength in their

Laird Watt and Ken Farmer, the task of defending the title will not be without its difficulties, but with three of last year's team remaining, and with so many promising players in the college, the prospects for another victory are bright.

Accident Adds Years To Life

Tram Car Fall Provides Correct Treatment

London.—The revelation that an accident had lengthened a man's life was made at an inquest at Greenwich.

The dead man was Edward Westwood, aged 60, who fell off a swerving tramcar and died two days later in hospital. Dr. W. D. Wiggins, medical superintendent of St. Alfege's Hospital, said a post-mortem examination showed no fracture of the skull but a haemorrhage of the brain. The dead man had been suffering for a long time from a very high blood pressure, which caused a sudden rupture of an artery of the brain, followed by death.

It was purely a coincidence that this attack occurred just at the instant that the tramcar lurched, but as the result of the man's heavy fall into the roadway he lost quite a pint of blood through bleeding from the nose. "Paradoxical as it may sound," said Dr. Wiggins, "the accident, instead of hastening his death, actually prolonged his life. He would certainly have died sooner if the accident had not happened, as this bleeding from the nose relieved the high blood pressure." "In fact," added the doctor, "one of the first things we should try at the hospital in the ordinary way would be to bleed him to reduce the high blood pressure." The jury returned a verdict of death due to natural causes.

Charcoal Is Used As Autobus Fuel

Rome.—A bus that runs on charcoal has made its appearance in the streets of Rome for the first time. Although similar in appearance to the ordinary petrol-driven vehicle, the new bus is fitted with an engine which burns gas produced by the combustion of charcoal.

Its running cost is greatly below that of the petrol bus. Trials seem to have been satisfactory and the authorities hope to use charcoal buses on a large scale and to earn a profit with the bus service instead of losing heavily as at present. At present, the lowest bus fare is 1½d., which covers a distance in no case greater than, say, from Ludgate Hill to Trafalgar Square. It is planned to replace trams with the new type of bus.

NO FIRE, JUST A CAT Manchester, England. — A cat which had fallen down the steep banks of the River Irwell and was stranded for 12 hours, on an outcrop of rock, was rescued by members of the Manchester fire brigade.

CLEVER RUSE Rangoon, India. — Customs authorities frustrated a clever ruse to smuggle cocaine, when they seized 50 ounces of the dope hidden in bamboo chairs.

Peasants Urged To Drink More Wine

Rome.—Some thousands of Italians will have their palates wooed with the finest wines of this country when the government sets about its campaign in September to make Italy more "wine conscious."

In order to put a real kick into its wine-boosting efforts the government has ordered the construction of a motor truck equipped with the most up-to-date refrigerators and tasting booths, which will tour the country giving the Italian in the street a first-hand acquaintance with his native wines. The truck will be labelled with the slogan "Drink More Wine."

DEAD MEN'S MILLIONS

London.—Millionaires, who played so great a part in the provision of last year's Budget surplus, seem likely to give another this year.

It is no secret in well-informed political quarters that Mr. Chamberlain is aiming for a surplus this year even bigger than last.

He wants to take 25 cents off the income tax, give back the other half of the pay cuts, and restore income tax allowances.

This, he feels, would make a good prelude to an election.

A NEW RECORD

In nine weeks since the financial year began the Treasury collected $76,000,000 in death duties, nearly $20,000,000 more than this time last year—and last year's was a record.

When Treasury men want to refer to extreme good fortune, they talk about "Chamberlain's Luck."

Major John Berners, who left $5,500,000, contributed $2,000,000 in death duties. Sir Louis Baron, tobacco magnate, who died recently, will add more hundreds of thousands. Mr. J. H. Buxton, brewery director, and Lord Faringdon contributed about $3,750,000 in two days.

Graduate motoring alone to Toronto for Varsity game, desires three or four passengers. Leaving Friday afternoon, returning Monday afternoon. If interested please phone Mr. Turner at Lancaster 5181 during business hours.

"Tired of Being Tossed About"

Howie Morenz is ready to quit hockey for good. The Stratford Streak who has for eleven years been a blazing meteoric figure in the world's fastest game made this announcement exclusively to The Herald this afternoon.

"I'm through" said Morenz. I feel that I've meant a lot to the game and the National Hockey League. I've given my best for eleven years, ever since I came up to the major league as a recruit out of Stratford. Now I'm ready to quit.

"I'm tired of being tossed around in this deal and that without being consulted. They never seem to think that I might have something to say about where I should play or whether I'm even ready to play again.

consciousnesses by this time, that there will not be a McGill Grads Hockey Team this year, for several reasons, the most important of which seems to be that the gentlemen who were expected to compose its ranks find that their services will be better appreciated elsewhere. At present none of them seems to have found that elusive elsewhere but they are all agreed on one point anyway, and that is that there will not be a Grads team. And that, as they say, is that. Professional interests, it is rumored, are beckoning to Nelson Crutchfield and Jack McGill, with Maroons bidding for the former's services while Canadiens seem to be angling for the latter's. The amateur Canadiens are also concentrating on these two men, and may be successful in keeping the simon-pures of last season from becoming pros. Royals are clamoring loud and long that to them alone belong the versatile hockey talents of Hughie Farquharson and Maurice Powers, while Frank Shaughnessy and Kenny Farmer have been allotted, as it were, to Vics. The best way to find out who will go where is to put all the names in a hat and then hide the hat somewhere and wait until the hockey season rolls around.

Butcher Shows How To Revive Dead Goldfish

Artificial Respiration Plus Stimulants Soon Brings Mac Back to Life.

Halifax.—"Now you take Mac here," said Percy Foy. He didn't mean exactly that; he was just singling out Mac from the other 199 goldfish in the tank. But if he had meant it, there would have been no takers. For Mac was just as dead a goldfish as the reporters ever hoped to see.

Goldfish are a sort of hobby with Percy Foy. He's chief butcher on the Cunard liner Alaunia and of all the odd charges placed in care of a liner's butcher on a transatlantic crossing, Percy prefers goldfish.

Sometimes there are hundreds, rich golden-red, mottled, little ones and big ones, and some with tall plumage that would shame a bird of paradise. On each and every one Percy bestows the same careful attention. He has learned now that a goldfish's constitution sometimes doesn't react favorably to a sea voyage. Once he carried a thousand from New York to England.
